Prvt. Rivin Writes About Torrid Texas

"Touch of South" Not Meeting Favor of ERC In Dugan Country

Proving that Dugan can be wrong on occasion, Private Arnold Rivin ev-'45, advises prospective late-comers into the fighting forces, "When you get your call, DON'T let them send you to Texas."

That is the ominous warning of one of the six journalists who left with the ERC-ROTC detachment, April 12. Private Rivin, assigned to the clerical staff of the 51st infantry at Camp Wolters, Texas, says he is the only Montana man in the specialists service there.

Continuing his report of parched surroundings, Rivin writes: "This place is not bad now—only about 100 in the shade. Of course, there is no shade."

His expectation of warm, summer days ahead makes interesting reading for those who like their reading on the masculine side.

Private Rivin also bemoans the "water discipline" system. "We can't drink water when we feel that we need it most. On marches we'll be ready to drop, but we can't have water. Then, too, the liquid refreshment we do get is warm and full of chlorine."

"We're training to fight on a desert, and they couldn't have chosen a better spot."

Rivin's vigorous outdoor training program will end in about six weeks after which he will enter nine weeks of technical training.

"Then it's probably overseas, and a chance for promotion," says Private Rivin.

English Instructor Tells Highlights Of Current Issue of Mountaineer; Compares With Professionals

Appraising the current issue of the Mountaineer, Mrs. Dorothy Van Ghent, English instructor, remarked, "The writers represented in the current issue of the Mountaineer are concerned with putting their lands in order, a virtue which is unusual in a college magazine and which alone would lend distinction to this one. For evaluating the sober intensity, the focused insight, of the pieces in the Mountaineer, one compares it with literary reviews of national circulation rather than with other college magazines."

Three autobiographical sketches are included. Warren Peterson's "Conqueror" deals with the South Dakota dust-bowl refugees.

"The biographical subject matter is carried side by side with the larger history of the plains, giving immediacy and incisiveness to the more general issue," Mrs. Van Ghent said.

"I Meet the Boston Proletariat"

"Walter King's 'I Meet the Boston Proletariat' is an account of an engagingly articulate Montanan's homesickness for talk, any kind of talk, among Bostonians."

"Leroy Aserlind, in his 'Barnyard Sketches,' has a faculty of seizing upon the memorable and tangy image of sight, smell, and voice."

"The story 'Smoked Meat,' by Jean Gordon, uses familiar subject matter—the tragedy of the idealism of the very young, an idealism of dance-hall romance and lipstick beauty. Its materials are immediate and simple."

"Sankari—the Great One"

"Sankari—the Great One," by Kerttu Eronen, is the story of a Finnish coal miner, farmer and song writer on the side. Though

MARRIED IN HOLLYWOOD

Lucie Clapp '41 and John Hagens ex-'38 were married May 1 in Hollywood, Calif., where Mr. Hagens is now employed in the Lockheed Aircraft plant.

Mrs. Hagens was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and received her bachelor degree in English. Before her marriage she was employed with the office of admission in the Registrar's office.

Hagens, Phi Delta Theta, majored in journalism while here and later received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Iowa State University. The couple reside in Hollywood.

Erkki is fatally romantic, his story is salvaged by the ironies of common sense."

"The poets in this issue," comments Mrs. Van Ghent, "are also putting their lands in order. Helen McDonald and David Perkins both have the speech of individuals and it is an oral speech; they 'talk'."

The Perennial Freshman . . .

Last night some 30 students and faculty members of the journalism school met at Montana Power Park for a picnic. Not a run-of-the-mill organization picnic. Certainly not a beer bust. The occasion was Dean Stone Night. Honoring Dean Stone, this tradition dates back to "Shack" days when graduating seniors used to meet with the Dean for an evening of tales of the Salish Indians and to say their farewells to four years of college journalism.

This year the group was smaller than in past years. Graduating seniors recalled evenings of their undergraduate days when newspaper men from every section of the state came to Missoula to be present for Dean Stone Night — when feeding the hungry crew took night onto two hours. Gas rationing and the draft have changed the picture, but not the tradition.

The story of Dean Stone and his baby, the J-School, is an old and familiar one. From rags to riches. It would do credit to Horatio Alger.

In 1914 A. L. Stone, then a prominent Montana newspaper man, organized the School of Journalism of Montana State University. As there were no adequate housing facilities, the school was housed in a group of tents during fall quarter. The "School in Tents" became widely known throughout the nation. Leading newspapers all over the country carried pictorial proof to their readers. Winter quarter found the journalism students firmly entrenched in a bicycle shed. This shed continued to house the journalists until 1920, when the school was moved to the S. A. T. C. barracks. In 1938 the present J-School was finished. Dean Stone's baby had grown up.

Last spring Dean Stone was forced to give up active service as dean of the school of journalism, but he is still a familiar figure to journalism students as he still keeps an office on the third floor as Dean Emeritus.

Not only to graduating seniors, but to lowly underclassmen as well, is Dean Stone Night one of the pleasantest memories of campus traditions. The "perennial freshman" hasn't changed.

Students Believe Changes In College to Be Permanent

By CLARE MacNEIL

"Do you think the war will permanently change colleges and universities?"

Some of our students think the changes will be good ones, for the most part. Here are the replies eight of them gave.

lish major: "The changes already apparent due to the war are significant of what is to come. The students who are remaining in school now are working hard, and know why they are going to college. After the war a majority of the students will probably return because of the post-war difficulty of getting and holding jobs with little training, as they are doing now."

Phyllis Ibell, senior, business administration: "The curriculum will be less broad. People will have a better realization of the value of university training. There will be less people in school who are being sent by their families, or come for social life."

Marilyn Hillstrand, freshman, journalism: "After the war there will be a greater need for educated men and women. As a result of training they are receiving now, many men and women who never thought of going to college will come back."

Betty Ulrigg, senior, home economics: "The war will tend to make the curriculum more practical and less classical. Those who return to school will be more mature and have a sincere desire for education."

Bob Zahn, senior, chemistry: "Many people will return to school because they can't get good jobs unless they do. Universities should remain more general, and if people only want technical training, they should have more trade schools."

Gordon Swanson, senior, economics: "College enrollment will be the largest for a period of two graduating classes, or eight years, after the war. Government income won't drop as fast as expenditures, and part of this will probably be diverted into the coffers of universities."

Sam Filicetti, junior, pharmacy: "The Law School and a few other departments will fold up during the war due to the lack of students and faculty shortages."

Charles Barnwell, junior, business administration: "Stick to technical training. Liberal arts are useless. The general courses are all right for some people, but they should not be compulsory. Federal support for universities, and the talk of government loans for tuition will probably never materialize."

Softball Rematch Play Of Air Corps-University Slated for Sunday

Game Will Be Played on Campbell Field
Squadron Four Fills in for Quarantined
North Hall All-Star Outfit

Army Air Corps and University All-Star softball teams tangle in a revenge match Sunday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at Campbell Field on South Higgins Avenue. The first game between the two teams, which was won by the Air Corps 7 to 6, led to considerable dispute, being rained out in the fifth inning. The University tossers are again the underdogs, having lost their star pitcher, Dick Kern, to the Marine Corps. All proceeds of the contest will go to the Army Air Corps Recreational Fund. Admission will be 30 cents, men in uniform and University students with activity tickets, 10 cents.

The lineup for the Air Corps will be completely made up of boys from squadron four, squadron five being in quarantine. Chuck Klein is the captain in charge of the squad.

After seeing the exhibition of the Army team in the first all-star game, squadron four has been organizing its own ball club with the thought in mind of challenging the All-Stars. Now, with over half of the original service team in quarantine, squadron four has the chance it has been waiting for. Many of these boys have played semi-pro and professional ball before and have been eager for major competition. The captain of the squad promises a snappier all-around organization, faster and more accurate fielding and hitting power plus.

Several of the players who participated in the first game will be included in this one. Wedin will start on the mound for the University team, Fiske catching. Some changes to give more batting power have been made in the outfield, but the infield will remain the same. Dewey Raymond, Malta, will start in short field; Car Schiller, Chicago, in left field; Jack Swarthout, Prosser, Wash., in center, and Evie Morris, Billings, in right. Bill Jones, Livingston, is slated for relief pitching.

In the first meeting Kern, the University fireballer, held the Army hitless for the first four innings, but in the fifth he lost control of the slippery ball and allowed six runs to come in to provide the Air Corps squad with a 7 to 6 victory. University hitters nipped the Air Corps pitcher for 11 hits and 6 runs in the five innings. Both teams are exceptionally agile in the field, showing ability and pressure reflexes gained only through years of baseball experience. McConnell, Skelly and Potter lived up to all expectations of professional ball players.

Rivalry for this game promises to be even more intense than before. Both teams are at a fighting pitch, the University boys eager for revenge, the Air Corps trainees anxious to hold their winning edge. Competition should be greater than ever for this, the last clash between the two teams.

Phi Sigs Earn Chance
For Softball Playoff by Defeating SAE

Phi Sigma Kappa burst loose with a seven-run rally in the third inning last night in their final softball game of the intramural season to tie the score and later went on to defeat the SAE's 11-to-8 and win a chance to enter the title playoff. Phi Delta Theta blasted Sigma Chi 12-to-7 Monday evening to assure themselves a chance in the finals. The Independents nosed out a hard-fighting Sig Ep-Theta Chi squad Tuesday and maintained their mathematical chance for playoff entry.

Sigma Chi led in a ball game for the first time this season as they started out right with three runs in the first inning and two more in the third. The Phi Deltas came back, however, to tie the score in the fourth and breeze in a flurry of runs in the fifth and sixth on hits, walks and errors.

The Independents jumped to an early 5-to-2 lead over the Sig Ep-Theta Chi's, increased their margin to four runs and then relaxed to let five runs come in. In the last inning trailing 6-to-5, Sig Ep-Theta Chi got two men on base with only one away. Stirratt, the next batter, bounded an easy one down the third base line and the Independents grabbed a double, third to second, to end the ball game.

The Phi Sigs combined two hits, four walks and an error to bring in seven runs in the third inning and overtake the SAE lead in last night's game. SAE tied it in the fourth, but let up again in the fifth as Phi Sigma Kappa scored three more runs on two hits, a walk and two very costly infield errors. An SAE rally in the final inning was stopped with one tally as Burgess was caught trying to steal home and Strekall popped to the pitcher for the final out ending the ball game.

Intramural Trackmeet Slated May 29

Saturday, May 29, will see the annual intramural trackmeet on Dornblaser field, announced Vince Wilson, Intramural Sports Manager, yesterday.

All events will be run off with the exception of the 2-mile run. If the field is crowded with men for events, preliminaries will be run off in the morning with the finals in all events in the afternoon. Each fraternity will enter its team along with the independent factor. Points will be given for the first four places in each event and the team copping the greatest number of points will win the Intramural Track Trophy.

Anyone registered in school may enter, provided he is not a track letterman. The Army Air Corps College Training Detachment may enter contestants under an unattached restriction which stipulates that these men will receive no points toward the trophy.

by reynolds

A revenge match, as Wayne Glase prefers to call it, will be staged at Campbell Field on South Higgins avenue Sunday afternoon between the Army and University All-Stars. It seems that the University boys are suckers for punishment.

Mr. Glase is still strong in his conviction that, somewhere, sometime, if enough games are played between the Army and collegians, his squad will pull the impossible and win a contest from the trainees.

All Glase can find to blame his All-Stars loss to is the rain. He writes such doleful comments unmindful of the inability of his cohorts to hit that little white thing known as a ball. The All-Stars' hitting power was at such a low ebb it reminded one of the '29 stock market crash.

Adams is Unable To Coach Grizzly Track Team

Capt. Harry Adams of the United States Army, former Grizzly track coach, will be unable to coach the University team participating in the Pacific Coast Conference track-meet at Seattle Saturday.

It was originally planned for Captain Adams to coach the team, as he is stationed there, but Army duties interfere, so the boys will be denied the expert advice of their former coach.

Richard Bowman, Casper, Wyo.; Paul Kampfe, Kalispell, and Arnold Scott, Plains will represent the University in the meet. Scott and Kampfe will participate in the dashes, Bowman in the jumps and pole vault.

Man for man, the Army team was better all around except for Dick Kern's pitching. Without Kern, the All-Stars will be lost. True enough the collegians did get a few hits (we can't forget that smashing homerun of Jack Swarthout's) but the trainees also got to Kern for hits, which is unusual in these parts. However, I truly believe that there is no other pitcher on the All-Star roster that can hold the Army boys down for any length of time whatever. Without Kern, the local lads will be chasing balls to all corners of the park all afternoon. The Army boys simply have too much power at the plate for the All-Stars to match.

Well from where we sit now it looks like another shoo-in for Chuck Klein and his bombardiers Sunday, so don't miss this final flicker of the All-Stars to redeem themselves.

Dean Stone, Seniors Feted

Dean Stone night, traditional senior farewell picnic, honoring Dean Emeritus, A. L. Stone, was celebrated Wednesday by students of the School of Journalism, faculty members and visiting alumni in Montana Power Park.

Climaxing senior week for journalism students who have worn the Dean Stone Eton tie for the past week, feature attractions of the evening were graduating senior farewells and Dean Stone's campfire speech.

He spoke briefly of the spirit of "the shack" and its effect on the careers of young graduates of the school. He reminded young people of the pattern of trail-blazing of the Salish Indians, comparing it to the trail-blazing of life, education being the tools.

Dorothy Rochon, Press Club president, mistress of ceremonies, read telegrams and letters from alumni unable to be present for the evening.

The campfire ceremony was concluded with the singing of "College Chums."
